16th Symposium on Application of Plasma Processes (SAPP XVI)

January 20-25, 2007
Grand Hotel Permon, Podbanské, Slovakia

Invitation

You are cordially invited to attend the 16th Symposium of Application of Plasma Processes (SAPP XVI), which will be held in Grand Hotel Permon, Podbanské, The High Tatras, Slovakia.

General Information

The SAPP is a biennial international conference, the last having been held in Podbanské in 2005. Topics range from the basic physics and chemistry of thermal and low pressure plasmas to industrial processes and processing techniques. The symposium creates forums to discuss recent developments and exchange the information and ideas between researches and industrial practitioners.

Topics

- 1. Electrical discharges and other plasma sources
- 2. Elementary processes and plasma chemical reactions
- 3. Plasma-surface interactions
- 4. Plasma treatment of polymer and biological material
- 5. Nanometer-scaled plasma technology

Symposium Program

The Conference program will include 12 invited lectures, 18 short lectures and poster presentations. Contributions will be published in the Book of proceedings and also in the special issue of Acta Physica Slovaca (February 2007), dealt by Current Contents database, recognized by European Physical Society and indexed in Physics Abstracts.

Social Program

A number of social events will be organized for conference participants and their guests. The program will include every day skiing. There will be a variety of other possibilities such as excursions and sightseeing tours.

Language

The Symposium language will be English.

Location

Grand Hotel Permon in Podbanské is located in western part of The High Tatras. Distant 350 km from the Slovak capital, Bratislava (400 km from Vienna airport in Schwechat).
